Corpsman's Creed

It is my obligation as a member of the Corps to attain such perfection as a First Aider and Corpsman that I will be welcomed, in time of emergency, in the homes of the other members of the Corps as well as in the homes of the other members of the community.

Every patient of the Corps, his relatives and friends, has a right to expect that, since I answered the call for aid I am capable of caring for his injuries or sickness to the limit permitted a Corpsman.

To achieve and maintain this high standard of proficiency, I must be completely familiar with the contents of the latest edition of the "American Red Cross First Aid Textbook", know the use and location of all the equipment carried on the ambulance and actively participate in Drill Meetings, including the demonstration of my first aid skills whenever called upon.
